Sea Pines Golf Club

Sea Pines Golf Course (also known as Army Golf Club II) is constructed along the gulf of Thailand in the Suan Son Pradiphat (Sea Pine Tree Garden).

Most area within the Sea Pines are comprised of bracken pine trees and enriched by the beauty of oceans and mountains. The army originally developed the site as a form of retreat for serving soldiers and veterans and their families.

The Sea Pines course design and layout have been developed to give golfers a wide range of challenge. Depending on wind conditions, the course difficulty will vary. The course is created with six holes lying on the beachside.

The dogleg, par-5 12th hole is one of the toughest, as the design affords it protection in the form of fairway bunkers and water hazard along the right-hand side. Moreover, a small bunker located in the middle of the fairway creates a dilemma – go for a driver from the tee, or ‘play it safe’ by opting for a ‘lay-up’ approach?

Along the stretch at Sea Pines, the sea breeze comes in play and the three final holes are among the best in Hua Hin golf. The 16th is a dogleg par-5 which demands a drive to a narrow fairway down the hill to avoid water hazards on both sides. Looking down at the hole for their second shot will give golfers an amazing view of the ocean and mountains. The most challenging part of the hole is the approach shot. One has to choose between slicing over the water/bunker onto the sloping green or take a safe route to the left side of the fairway.

The signature 17th is a par-3 which consists of a spectacular ocean view on the background. The tee shot is all carry over water and is comprised of wide undulating green that is well surrounded by beach bunker. Shots which are slightly longer or shorter will find themselves landing on the sand. The 17th may also be tougher depending on the wind and pin placement as this hole is played over a large lake onto peninsula green.
